Train-Trailer Collide Here

A trailer-load of steel attached to a truck driven by Jack Flanagan of Maywood was struck by a Santa Fe freight car yesterday afternoon at Madrid and Carson street but the driver escaped unhurt and the trailer was only slightly damaged. Flanagan, who is employed by the Pacific Western Oil company, told police he did not hear the engine's whistle nor see the wig-wag signal. The later was operating at the time police arrived, however.

Conductor M. B. McNamara was in charge of the freight which was going south on Madrid. The truck-trailer was headed west on Carson street. Steel derrick equipment was scattered about the street, which was wet but no rain was falling at the time. Flanagan in the truck cab had cleared the tracks.
